The PFJ fails to prohibit Anticompetitive Licensing terms that Microsoft currently uses to keep Open Source applications from running on Windows.

I believe that Microsoft is buying its way out of this predicament, and I don't believe the PFJ is satisfactory to consumers at all.

Far too many of Microsoft's anticompetitive practices are continuing to this day, and the PFJ will do nothing to change most of them.

Please do not adopt the PFJ without substantial changes to address the deficiencies outlined by Dan Kegel on www.kegel.com.

Thank you
